

Jade Corbin

'A' Levels

Psychology
English Language and Literature
Geography

Destination

Edge Hill University

Course

Psychology

Geography had always been an interest to me and the opportunity to study it in depth was fascinating. The Wales trip was definitely a highlight (despite the weather)!

English was tougher than I expected but I have enjoyed reading a wide variety of texts from Shakespeare to women's journalism.

I hope to study Psychology at University and, therefore, taking it at A Level confirmed my choice. The course choice content continually interested me and I enjoyed the mix of research and approaches.

I worried about joining the Sixth Form having come from another school, but found I settled in easily and really enjoyed my time here.